Rosemary Callard-Szulgit (Ed.D., 1979, ELP) reports that her website is now available at: partners-for-excellence.com.

Craig Centrie (Ph.D., 2000, ELP), Lois Weis (ELP), and Michelle Meyers (ELP doctoral student) organized a special opening for attendees of the GSE Graduate Student Research Symposium at El Museo Francisco Oller y Diego Rivera Gallery, 91 Allen Street, downtown Buffalo. El Museo, founded by Centrie, is the first and only visual arts organization in Western New York that is dedicated to the exhibition of visual arts by artists of color. The opening, March 31, 2004 from 7-9 p.m., will feature a private showing of the work of two Native American artists, Mike Martell and Tom Huff. Wine and hors d’ouvres will be served during the event and free parking will be available behind El Museo. This special showing is in honor of Paul Willis, keynote speaker for the April 1, 2004 GSE Graduate Student Research Symposium (for more information about the symposium: wings.buffalo.edu/gsa/new_elp/symposium04.html).

Doug Clements (LAI) and Julie Sarama (LAI) were the editors for the recent special issue of Mathematical Thinking and Learning on learning trajectories. (See the Publications section for the two articles they wrote for this issue.)

Greg Dimitriadis (ELP) co-authored a book chapter “Globalizing Pedagogies: Power, Resentment, and the Re-narration of Difference” (from the 2001 book Multicultural Curriculum) that was recently included on a short reading list for participants in an Intensive Training Workshop for Afghan Curriculum Developers, sponsored by UNESCO, Kabul. The workshop was attended by 32 Afghan educators and held in Tehran, Iran. According to the program, the event was held (in part) “To identify curricular issues to be addressed in educational reconstruction in Afghanistan in view of promoting the quality of learning.” Dimitriadis also organized and is chairing a roundtable discussion at AERA on Dennis Carlson’s new book Leaving Safe Harbors: Towards a New Progressivism in American Education and Public Life. Participants are Peter McLaren, Cameron McCarthy, Lois Weis (ELP), and Glenn Hudak. (See listings for Dimitriadis and Weis in the Presentations section.)
