Amanda Nickerson Jilynn Werth, PhD '16

Reports of school shootings and bullying incidents have increased at a rapid and frightening rate. UB experts like Amanda Nickerson, director of the Alberti Center for Bullying Abuse Prevention, work to respond quickly to such occurrences by providing solid research that guides decisions on how best to stop shooters and bullies. Annual gifts to the university provide critical resources to help Nickerson and her research team find the answers that save lives. Counseling and school psychology graduate student Jilynn Werth, PhD '16, one of Nickerson's assistants, studied the role of bystanders to bullying, particularly abuse of disabled people, while earning her UB doctoral degree. Now an intern psychologist at a Pennsylvania school, Werth valued the opportunity the financial support gave her "to work on a research team and learn about a topic I had become passionate about." Your gifts will help UB researchers work faster to eliminate senseless violence in our schools.

Abdul-Malik Davies

Protecting our planet is a prime passion for Abdul-Malik Davies, who chose to attend UB after learning of its focus on sustainability and its experiential learning opportunities for students. Davies, an Honors College student in chemical and biological engineering, joined the Education and Leadership Fellowship in Sustainability (ELFS), one of several programs supported by annual gifts to UB. He and fellow ELFS members have initiated projects to cut 10 percent of UB's energy use by turning off unused lights across campus, and decrease unnecessary waste by recycling usable objects—books, storage cubes, tables, electronics—left behind by departing students each May. The group works all summer, sorting and refurbishing the items, then sells them to incoming dorm residents each fall. “I want to thank everyone who made ELFS possible at UB,” Davies says. “By funding this program, you have helped me and many other students realize our potential and make our planet a better place.”

Your gifts create leaders who will protect our planet.

Cassie Oursler

Annual gifts to UB help enhance student living and learning environments on campus, including the athletics facilities. UB student-athletes like psychology major Cassie Oursler, a member of the UB Bulls women's basketball team, says she chose to attend UB "because it is a great university close to my home, with a wonderful athletics staff and beautiful facilities." Her family in nearby Grand Island is able to attend her games. And Oursler says access to the basketball arena and weight room gives her "everything an athlete needs to perform successfully." Oursler, who hopes to coach after playing basketball internationally, is thankful to donors who have given to keep UB sports facilities up to date. "They have helped create successful athletes here at UB. Our donors are the reason we are able to train at the highest level."

Your gifts provide athletic facilities so student-athletes can reach their peak.

Lindsay Macaluso

UB is making entrepreneurs of its students, helping launch them and their businesses, even before graduation. One such student is Lindsay Macaluso, who with a partner has developed MemoryFox, a digital platform for recording, storing and sharing family audiovisuals. Macaluso, who is pursuing an MBA and an MSArch degree in real estate management, credits UB's business-skills programs—many supported by annual gifts to UB—with helping her make her passion part of her academics. Such programs are “the source of countless resources in legal, operational and business development,” says Macaluso, who hopes to develop businesses for a venture capital firm someday. She thanks donors to the annual fund for giving her a well-rounded student experience. “UB continually surprises me with the opportunities it offers students. There is an inimitable commitment to innovation at the university, which translates to fantastic opportunities for students.”
